

REQUIRED TEXTBOOK

Relethford, J. H. (2013). The human species: An introduction to biological anthropology (9th Ed.). Boston, MA: McGraw-Hill.

This book is the primary textbook; it provides an excellent overview of the major materials covered in biological anthropology. You should keep up on your reading in this book as it complements and expands on the materials provided in the lectures. If you can find an earlier edition, you may use it, but be aware that the paleoanthropological data will not be current.

Website (optional) http://highered.mcgraw-hill.com/sites/0078034981/student_view0/index.html

This website can be accessed via the Internet and might be helpful as you study for examinations and to help clarify confusions. If you bought a new version of the book, there is a card with a registration code that lets you in as a first-time user (extra benefits), but even if you do not have this access, you can use most of the site. Simply click on the Student Edition link and go to useful sites (You can access everything but the Powerweb articles).