

Academic Journal Articles

A JSTOR Search

What is an Academic Journal Article?

There are two criteria I use to determine if a source is an academic journal article:

Is the source published in an academic journal (Filter #1)?

Is there at least one reference used in the source (Filter #2)?

When is a source in a journal NOT academic?

Often book reviews are found in journals; do not count these as academic journal articles.

Sometimes there is commentary about an issue in a journal; it is not peer reviewed, not original research. Do not count.

One hint that something is a commentary is that the page length is 1-2 pages and there are no references used.

If you are looking for journal articles you can access JSTOR by first clicking on the All Database listed by title link.

The screenshot shows the Library Media Center website. A red arrow points from the text above to the link 'All Databases listed by title' in the 'Databases' section.

Review of Main Points

A source is only an academic journal article if it is:
Published in an academic journal And
It has at least 1 (one) reference.

A few last comments on types of sources:

You can use book reviews to identify a book you might want to read.

You might look at journal commentaries to better understand the broad sweep of an issue
